'Gang of Six' Targets Tax Breaks

Bipartisan plan trims retirement savings, mortgage deductions

Washington

A new bipartisan plan to reduce government borrowing would target some of the most cherished tax breaks enjoyed by millions of families — those promoting health insurance, home ownership, charitable giving and retirement savings — in exchange for lowering overall tax rates for everyone.

Many taxpayers would face higher taxes — a total of at least $1.2 trillion over the next decade, and perhaps more.

The plan, released this week by the bipartisan "Gang of Six" senators, punts on many of the most difficult issues, leaving it to congressional committees to fill in the details later. But supporters say it provides a framework to simplify the tax code, making it easier for businesses and individuals to comply while eliminating incentives to game the system.

President Obama and senators from both parties lauded the plan as a possible breakthrough in negotiations to allow the government to incur further debt and avert a possible default on U.S. obligations on Aug. 2. Some congressional leaders, however, said the plan lacks details and could produce much bigger tax increases than advertised. The Republican staff of the House Budget Committee issued a critique saying the revenue increase could exceed $2 trillion over the next decade, when compared to current tax policy.

"A tax increase is the wrong policy to pursue with so many Americans out of work."

— HOUSE MAJORITY LEADER ERIC CANTOR, R-VA., REACTING TO THE BIPARTISAN "GANG OF SIX" PLAN THAT CALLS FOR HIGHER TAXES FOR MANY.

The plan would simplify the tax code by reducing the number of tax brackets from six to three, and lowering the top rate from 35 percent to somewhere between 23 percent and 29 percent. That could provide a windfall for wealthy taxpayers because the 35 percent tax bracket currently applies to taxable income above $379,150.

To help pay for lower rates, the plan would reduce popular tax breaks for mortgage interest, health insurance, charitable giving and retirement savings. Other tax breaks would be spared, including the $1,000-per-child tax credit and the Earned Income Tax Credit, which helps the working poor stay out of poverty. STEPHEN OHLEMACHER (AP)

'Heat Dome' Chokes U.S.

Mass of trapped hot, humid air ushers in extreme temperatures

Chicago

If the extreme heat and humidity lingering over much of the nation feels like a steam bath, it's because the same principles are at work in the atmosphere.

Vast amounts of warmth and moisture have become trapped under a huge "heat dome," bringing record-breaking temperatures and thick, topical air to scores of cities from North Dakota to the Ohio Valley. Now the system is moving east to spread the misery to some of the country's most densely populated areas through the weekend.

"It's hot no matter what you're doing or where you are," said Tim Prader, a 50-year-old construction worker who was taking a break Tuesday at a job site in St. Louis.

It's Not Unusual

While heat domes aren't uncommon, this one is unusual because of its size and duration. It began three days ago and may last seven to 10 days in some locations. And it's moving eastward, with temperatures expected to reach 100 degrees in Washington by Thursday. National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration records show that the United States broke 25 local high records for the date on Monday, including 103 degrees in both Edgemont, S.D., and Victoria, Texas. (AP)

The oppressive conditions extend from the northern Plains states to Texas and from Nebraska to the Ohio Valley. And they're expanding eastward.

When a high-pressure system develops in the upper atmosphere, the air below it sinks and compresses because there's more weight on top, causing temperatures in the lower atmosphere to heat up, said Eli Jacks, a meteorologist with the National Weather Service.

The dome of high pressure also pushes the jet stream and its drier, cooler air, farther north into Canada while hot, humid air from the Gulf of Mexico circulates clockwise around the dome, traveling farther inland than normal. That also explains why temperatures in, say, North Dakota this week aren't all that different from temperatures in Houston, he said.

The big difference is that people in Houston are accustomed to hot weather, while those in the north are not. What's more, because of the humidity, even nighttime brings little relief.

No widespread deaths have been reported, but the heat sent dozens of people to hospitals. Relief is on the way. By Monday, temperatures will drop into the mid-80s in the north.

PM Fights Hacking Maelstrom

Before lawmakers, Cameron distances himself from scandal

London

Prime Minister David Cameron dragged his political foes into Britain's phone-hacking scandal Wednesday, as he sought to distance himself from his former aide at the heart of the allegations and denied that his staff had tried to thwart police investigations.

Cameron, who left Africa early to address the emergency session of Parliament, defended his decision to hire ex-News of the World editor Andy Coulson as his communications chief.

Coulson was arrested this month, along with nine others, in connection with the tabloid's alleged practice of intercepting voicemails to get scoops. Cameron reminded lawmakers Wednesday that he has yet to be found guilty of anything.

But Cameron also sought to distance himself from Coulson. "With 20/20 hindsight ... I would not have offered him the job," he said. "You live and you learn, and, believe you me, I have learned."

He also dragged Labour Party officials into the spotlight, saying that most British politicians had tried to court media baron Rupert Murdoch, whose News Corp.

Fuel to the Fire

Prime Minister David Cameron faced a parliamentary debate on Wednesday hours after the release of a scathing report accusing the Metropolitan Police and News International of missteps in the phone hacking cases. The Home Affairs Committee accused Scotland Yard of a "catalogue of failures" in its original investigation and said News International had engaged in "deliberate attempts to thwart investigations," contradicting testimony from Rupert Murdoch on Tuesday. Syria warned the U.S. and French ambassadors Wednesday not to travel outside the capital without permission, two weeks after they angered the regime by visiting a city that has become the center of the uprising, which activists say has killed 1,600 people.

Serbia Nabs Prominent War Crimes Fugitive

By arresting suspect, nation fulfills terms for EU candidacy

Belgrade, Serbia

The last fugitive sought by the U.N.'s Balkan war crimes tribunal was seized by Serbian secret police Wednesday morning as an accomplice delivered him cash in a remote mountain forest.

The arrest of Goran Hadzic, former leader of Croatia's ethnic Serbs, was hailed as the symbolic closure of a horrific chapter in Balkan history and an important step toward Serbia's joining the European Union.

Less than two months after the capture of Bosnian Serb Gen. Ratko

Mladic, who was accused of some of the worst atrocities of the war in the former Yugoslavia, Serbian President Boris Tadic told his nation that "we have turned a difficult and grim page of our history."

Hadzic rose to prominence in 1991 through his links to Serbian leader Slobodan Milosevic's secret police, taking charge of an ethnic Serbian ministate created by the

Path to the EU

In October, the EU's executive arm is due to present a progress report on Serbia that is now expected to conclude that the country has fulfilled the requirements for candidacy, which will open the door for talks on accession to open by spring. brutal expulsion of non-Serbs from one-third of Croatia's territory.

According to the war crimes tribunal in The Hague, Netherlands, Hadzic was among those responsible for the 1991 leveling of Vukovar, said to be the first European city entirely destroyed since World War II.

In one of the worst massacres of the Croatian war, Serb forces seized at least 264 non-Serbs and tortured, shot and buried them in a mass grave. About 10,000 people died in the war, which ended in 1995.

The Hague tribunal indicted Hadzic in 2004 on 14 charges including war crimes and crimes against humanity, among them the murder, torture, deportation and forcible transfer of Croats and other non-Serbs. (AP)

A Decline in Aid

Humanitarian funding to help Somalia has declined since 2008, U.N. officials say. The U.S., once Somalia's largest donor, has reduced humanitarian funding by 88 percent, according to a September 2010 report of the U.N. Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs. The decline came after the U.S. Office of Foreign Assets Control, concerned about the diversion of aid by Islamic militants, imposed restrictions on agencies working in areas controlled by al-Shabab and froze some funding in March 2009. Somalia's famine has claimed tens of thousands of lives, the U.N. says

Nairobi, Kenya

An unfolding famine in parts of southern Somalia has killed tens of thousands of people, mostly children, the United Nations said Wednesday in an official declaration of what aid officials describe as the worst humanitarian crisis in the country in two decades.

The famine declaration comes months after U.N. and other aid agencies began sounding the alarm about a devastating drought in the Horn of Africa, where an estimated 10 million people are in need of help. The crisis has been aggravated by civil strife, low rainfall rates not seen in half a century and sharp increases in food prices.

"Somalia is facing its worst food security crisis in the last 20 years," Mark Bowden, the top U.N. official in charge of humanitarian aid to Somalia, told reporters, adding that an infusion of $300 million is needed in the next two months to help alleviate the crisis.

Dangerous Ground

For nearly two decades, Somalia has grappled with civil war and ineffective governments. Today, a weak and corrupt transitional government, backed by the United States and its allies, is in place, with little ability to address the crisis. Much of its energy is focused on preventing the capital, Mogadishu, from being overtaken by the al-Qaeda-linked al-Shabab militia.

This time, the famine is unfolding in the southern Somali regions of Bakool and Lower Shabelle, which are largely controlled by al-

Officially declared when acute malnutrition rates among children exceed 30 percent and when more than two people per 10,000 die every day, according to the U.N.'s Mark Bowden. Today, malnutrition rates in Somalia are the highest in the world; in some parts of the south, more than half of all children are severely malnourished. In some areas of Bakool and Lower Shabelle, six children per 10,000 under the age of 5 are dying every day, Bowden said. (TWP)

Backstory

In 1992, hundreds of thousands of Somalis starved to death, prompting a U.S.-led peacekeeping force to intervene. Within months, the force was engaged in an intense conflict to uproot Somali warlords. It eventually withdrew the next year after 18 U.S. soldiers were killed in a battle, an incident portrayed in the book and movie "Black Hawk Down." (TWP)

Shabab. Bowden said that nearly half of Somalia's 3.7 million people face hunger, malnutrition and other related problems. Of those, 2.8 million live in the south.

"If we don't act now, famine will spread to all eight regions of southern Somalia within two months, due to poor harvests and infectious diseases," Bowden said. "We still do not have all the resources for food, clean water, shelter and health services to save the lives of hundreds of thousands of Somalis."

U.S. Under Fire

On Wednesday, the United States announced that it would give an additional $28 million in aid to Somalis.

This year alone, it has provided more than $431 million in food and other emergency assistance to the eastern Horn of Africa, making it the region's largest donor nation.

But some aid agencies criticized the United States and other Western donors for failing to respond to the crisis quickly enough.

"The crisis has been building for several months, but the response from international donors and regional governments has been mostly slow, inadequate and complacent," Fran Equiza, the regional director of the British aid agency Oxfam, said in a statement.

"There has been a catastrophic breakdown of the world's collective responsibility to act." SUDARSHAN RAGHAVAN (THE WASHINGTON POST)

Who Gets Priority Seating?

Q When the seats say for handicap and seniors, how old does one have to be to be senior?

Well, that's an interesting question, and I'm not sure there's a right answer. To qualify for the reduced "senior" fare, you have to be 65. But to qualify for the priority seats, you don't need to have a specific disability, and I don't believe you have to be a certain age. You just have to need the seat. The able-bodied person occupying the seat isn't supposed to judge whether you're disabled enough or old enough. The person is just supposed to do the right thing and stand up.

Dr. Gridlock offers commuter counseling online at washingtonpost.com.

Q It seems like Metro's putting in good designs (poles on every seat, non-skid flooring, better signage, etc.) in the new rail cars. I noticed that they say that the cars are matched in pairs of four rather than two. So wouldn't this mean that they would lose the option to run six-car trains and be forced to run eight- or four-car trains instead?

There's nothing stopping Metro at some point in the future from operating these new 7000 series cars as four-car trains, rather than eight-car trains. But that certainly isn't the way Metro planning is going. The goal has been to provide more eight-car trains.

Q Do you have any thoughts on how Kwame Brown's sacking of Tommy Wells as Public Works and Transportation Committee chair will affect transportation priorities in D.C.?

Tommy Wells hadn't really had a chance to develop as a Metro board member, but he was doing a fine job as a defender of the interests of transit users. There was nothing about his performance as a Metro board member that would have caused a mayor to remove him. That said, I think D.C. has some Metro priorities that won't change. It wants bus fares to stay low and would rather see parking rates go up than fares. Those bottom line things won't change.

Q What the heck was going on at the Silver Spring Metro station Monday morning?

About 7:20, a train pulled in (marked Silver Spring), just sat there for a few minutes, then flipped its sign to Grosvenor and proceeded down the wrong side of the tracks. Didn't let passengers get on first. And I didn't see any other trains turning around at Silver Spring for the next 10 minutes or so. VERY odd.

What you describe about the train's switching signs sounds to me like one of the things Metro does when it's trying to get a line back on schedule. There's a rail switch south of Silver Spring. Metro can bring in Glenmont-bound trains on either track, change the sign for Grosvenor and board passengers.

METRO PULSE

What do you think of Metro's decision to close certain stations rather than single-track to get work done?

"I think I'd rather spread the pain. There are individuals who rely on a station being open."

MWAA reverses its decision for Metro stop beneath airport

Chantilly, Va.

The Metropolitan Washington Airports Authority Wednesday morning reversed its decision to locate a Metro station at Dulles International Airport underground, bowing to pressure from its partners on the project to extend rail service to Loudoun County.

The authority, which is managing construction of the 23-mile rail line, voted in April to approve the site near the main terminal, despite the fact that it cost more than an aboveground location farther away. However, the board was hammered by state and local officials and some members of Congress concerned about the rising price tag for the second phase of the rail extension, now estimated to cost $3.5 billion.

On Wednesday afternoon, U.S. Transportation Secretary Ray LaHood will host the latest in a series of meetings to try to trim the costs of Phase 2.

LaHood wants the Commonwealth of Virginia; Fairfax and Loudoun counties; Metro and the airports authority to agree to millions of dollars in cost savings.

The proposal is meant to spread the pain among local, state and regional investors, including commuters on the Dulles Toll Road, who are slated to pick up more than half the cost. The plan would shave hundreds of millions from the project.

The board voted 11-1 Wednesday morning to endorse the framework of LaHood's plan, including the aboveground station that would be near Daily Parking Garage No. 1. Many other details remain to be worked out.

"We couldn't make progress so long as [the underground location] was something to beat up on us about," authority board chairman Charles D. Snelling said after the meeting. "We're no longer the excuse or the whipping boy."

Snelling said he wants the board to formally adopt an agreement with all of the project's partners at its August meeting.

Work remains to finalize an agreement to end the NFL lockout

Pro Football

NFL player representatives met Wednesday in downtown D.C. to decide whether to recommend that all players approve a proposed 10-year deal that would end the sport's lockout. While there was hope that ratification vote by all the players was possible as soon as Wednesday night, a source told the Associated Press that the climactic action would have to wait at least a day.

"Our goal today is to see what's on the table [and] discuss the outlying issues that may or may not still be there," NFL Players Association President Kevin Mawae said at a morning news conference. "But make no mistake about it: The players are not in a rush. ... We're not tied to a timeline of July 21."

Indeed, sources said there remained work to do to finalize an agreement between owners and players, and there would be no vote Wednesday. A vote was possible on Thursday.

"We want to go back to work," Mawae said. "But we're not going to agree to any deal unless it's the right deal for all the players."

Several people with knowledge of the deliberations said they expected both sides to ratify the proposal. The 32 team owners could vote on it Thursday in Atlanta. NFL Commissioner Roger Goodell and owners on the league's bargaining committee met Wednesday in Atlanta.

If the deal is approved, operations likely will resume by early next week.

Teams are scheduled to open training camps in the next few days. The preseason is scheduled to open Aug. 7 with the Hall of Fame Game between the Chicago Bears and St. Louis Rams, and the regular season is scheduled to start Sept. 8 with the Green Bay Packers hosting the New Orleans Saints.

In the meantime, hundreds of players eligible for free agency will have to scramble to find teams. Free agency could begin by early next week, likely starting with a three-day window for teams to re-sign their own free agents. Teams also must sign the rookies they drafted in April and undrafted rookies. Free agent signings and trades of players have been on hold during the lockout, which began March 12.

"Our timetable is that which gets us ... the best deal for our players."

— NFLPA PRESIDENT KEVIN MAWAE, SAYING BEFORE WEDNESDAY'S MEETING THAT THE NFL PLAYERS WEREN'T GOING TO BE Pressed INTO AN AGREEMENT BY THURSDAY'S OWNERS MEETING.

The deal would have to be approved by at least 24 of the 32 owners. It must be ratified by a majority of the close-to 2,000 NFL players, who could vote at the same time to re-form their union. The players dissolved their union in March and filed an antitrust lawsuit against the owners. MARK MASKE (THE WASHINGTON POST)

Houston rookie Jose Altuve picked up his first major league hit with a single to right field off Tyler Clippard with two outs in the ninth. Clippard walked Hunter Pence before retiring Carlos Lee to send it to the 10th.

Werth had three hits and drove in Washington's only runs with a two-run homer that tied it 2-all in the sixth inning.

These days, the writer, producer and stand-up is bringing up-to-the-minute commentary to MSNBC and sold-out venues across the country. This weekend, Winstead will stop by the Arlington Cinema 'N' Drafthouse to poke fun at the pundits and headlines we love to hate.

What can the works of D.C. expect from your upcoming show?
People [in D.C.] can actually hear jokes that don't need to be explained. That's what's great about D.C. I can blab on about cable news and the crazy pundits, and it's just fun.

Do you have a favorite pundit or cable news show?

I'm sort of obsessed with "Morning Joe," only because Joe Scarborough reminds me of a younger version of my dad. I feel like I'm yelling at my dad and having a political fight with my dad.

Why do people love cable news so much?

I think people love "American Idol." I think it's a love-hate relationship with cable news. The constant editorializing of everything, it does get tiring — even from people whose side you like.

It feels like cable news looks at "The Daily Show" and instead of saying, "Oh, my god, is our news really that crappy?" they go, "Oh, I see what's wrong with our show — we should be funnier!"

Do you see yourself entertaining or educating audiences?

It's very hard to educate people with comedy because people have a short attention span. I think what I like to do is poke holes in a message when I see it and expose hypocrisy. KRISTINA GRAY

'Pop' Into the World of Warhol

Studio Theatre's show re-creates the artist's legendary Factory

Theater

"Zero to one percent of Studio Theatre patrons ever get to come back here," Hunter Styles says as he opens the door to an industrial-looking hallway and staircase. We're on a magical journey.

Styles and my other guide, Jennifer Harris, are two of the three directors of "Pop!," a Studio Theatre 2ndStage production billed as "a musical murder-mystery extravaganza." We establish early on that the moniker isn't exactly accurate: The show's not a mystery, and there's no murder. But there is music. And it's certainly an extravaganza.

Up the stairs we go, only to face two more doors. On show nights, one will open to regular theatergoers, and the other will be for the special people, the people who come dressed as if they were going to Andy Warhol's Factory — say, people wrapped in aluminum foil. Those people (you could be one, if you have enough foil) get to sit in a VIP section. The windows in the theater are papered with foil. Warhol's movies play on loops in the foyer. It's less a set than a re-creation of Warhol's famous '60s

Tom Story stars as the mysterious, bearded Andy Warhol. Yep, it's a wig.

MARVIN JOSEPH/TWP

Backstory

Spoiler alert: Valerie Solanas shot Andy Warhol. The radical Factory hanger-on called for the elimination of money and men in her SCUM Manifesto, and apparently thought she'd start with a bang. The incident inspired the 1996 film "I Shot Andy Warhol."

New York City art space, perfect for telling the story of the attempt on his life there in 1968. As it turns out, the mystery isn't who shot Andy Warhol; the mystery is Andy Warhol.

"You could do a murder mystery about a nonfatal shooting because the person who's shot is so purposefully vacant and opaque that they still can't figure out who did it because he didn't want to talk about it," Styles says. "A lot of Andy's art is [also] very flat and literal and ordinary. What does it mean? The other characters in the show are trying to figure out what he means, and he doesn't give a lot away."

"The point is that any of them could have shot him," says Keith Alan Baker, the show's third director and the artistic director of the 2ndStage program. "Any of them had motive." FIONA ZUBLIN (EXPRESS)

The War at Home

Civil War buffs breathe life into history with a major staging of the First Battle of Bull Run

When Robert Lee Hodge meets someone new, he might mention his interest in the Civil War. His impressive beard is the first clue that this is an understatement.

This weekend, Hodge (and his beard) will join 8,700 other participants at historic Manassas National Battlefield Park for a full-scale re-enactment of the First Battle of Bull Run — the first near the battle's actual site in 50 years. The program is part of a monthlong series of events in Northern Virginia marking the 150th anniversary of the first major battle of the Civil War.

Hodge, below right, prefers to be called a "historical interpreter." He's been doing re-enactments for 30 years, as both a Union and a Confederate soldier. Like many re-enactors, he's in the game less for the politics and more for the rush of maintaining historical accuracy. At 44, he makes his living from the Civil War — as a filmmaker, writer, researcher and tour guide.

Hodge — who will portray a Confederate soldier in this weekend's battle — is what's known in re-enactor circles as a "hardcore." He haunts the Library of Congress and National Archives for primary sources that tell him what it was like to be a soldier in the 1860s. He especially prizes the hi-res scans of historical battle photography, as they give him a better view of the stitching on the soldiers' coats.

Any re-enactment involving so many people is bound to include some with a looser commitment to history than Hodge's. Re-enactors who value the dramatic over the accurate get the label "farb" — no one is sure of its etymology — for such cheap tricks as fake blood or modern-day cheats like using sunscreen and bug spray for a day of lying "dead" on the field.

Hodge is willing to cut those guys a break. "[You get thousands of] people dressed up, and of course they vary in quality of uniform," he says. "But at a distance, you get to see that motion, humanity moving. And although it isn't perfect, it looks pretty cool."

— ROBERT LEE HODGE, A CIVIL WAR RE-ENACTOR WHO WILL JOIN ABOUT 8,700 OTHERS IN THIS WEEKEND'S STAGING OF THE FIRST BATTLE OF BULL RUN, THE FIRST NEAR THE BATTLEGROUND SITE IN 50 YEARS.

Backstory

On July 21, 1861, the First Battle of Bull Run — or, the First Battle of Manassas to Confederate forces — became the first major clash of the Civil War. The battle was a Confederate win and set the stage for the four years of increasingly vicious bloodshed that were to follow, including the Second Battle of Bull Run, in 1862. The traffic and organizational logistics of 1961's 100th anniversary Bull Run re-enactment at Manassas National Battlefield Park (the site of the actual battle) were so overwhelming that the National Park Service banned re-enactments on Park Service land — part of the reason this one will take place on nearby private property at Pageland Farm. F.Z.

Civil War Event Etiquette

Spectators are welcome at Bull Run, but it's important to remember that this is a serious affair. We asked Ann Marie Maher, executive director for Discover Prince William and Manassas, which hosts the event, for some etiquette tips. F.Z.

1 Are the guys in costumes going to talk like they're from 1861?

"If it's a formal program, they speak [in character] in the first person," Maher says. "If they're wandering through the camps, they'll answer questions in present-day terms."

2 So can I ask them about modern race issues or politics as they relate to the Civil War?

"There's rules against them spreading propaganda or being on soapboxes," Maher says. Check out the living-history tent for info on those topics.

3 Can I take pictures with them? Can I touch their hats?

Most re-enactors will be happy to take pictures with you, Maher says, but you should ask. "If you're approaching someone on a horse, you'd naturally ask, 'Is it OK to pet your horse?' or 'Can I touch your saber?'"

'Nothing Daunted' shares two educators' tale of self-discovery in 1916 rural Colorado

Books

Tales of privileged individuals temporarily embracing lower-class life are a staple of modern pop culture; look at "Green Acres," "The Simple Life" and "Undercover Boss."

Wickenden

But back in 1916, long before anyone had even heard of television, two young Victorian ladies — who, conveniently, happened to be avid chroniclers of their own lives — pursued momentous fish-out-of-water experiences. Smith-educated socialites Dorothy Woodruff and Rosamund Underwood left behind comfortable yet boring lives in Auburn, N.Y., for one-year teaching positions at a schoolhouse in rural Colorado — a move that was unheard of for women of their era and upbringing. Nearly a century later, Dorothy Wickenden's "Nothing Daunted" ($26, Scribner) recounts their tale.

Wickenden, who's executive editor of the New Yorker and also Woodruff's granddaughter, was inspired to research the story after discovering her grandmother's letters from that year — which included horseback rides to work, blizzards and a dramatic kidnapping.

What sets this apart from a regular family history?

It isn't just a family story. It's also a story of industrial east meets west, set 100 years ago. You don't often read a Western from the perspective of true gentlewomen.

grandmother had a real ear for dialogue, and she was able to capture some of what they said.

What's the most notable characteristic of your grandmother's letters?

What I love the most are her descriptions of the children she and Rosamund were teaching. My grandmother had a classroom of 10 little boys and one girl. They were young, very eager to learn, but they just said the funniest things. My

Do you think there's anything she and Rosamund purposely left out of their letters?

Because they had been brought up as proper Victorians, they really didn't write about their romances, even though both of them had very ardent romances going on.

Both women come across as very positive about their experience, even though it seems like they were roughing it.

There was one letter that Dorothy wrote to her older sister Anna, who had asked her, "Are you really as happy as you say you are?" Dorothy said, "I could so easily be homesick if I let myself, but I can't." My grandmother was this very stoic, make-the-best-of-every-circumstance kind of person. She watched the western women who had nothing and they never complained.

How did writing this book impact your view of your grandmother?

It's confirmed what I loved about her. How many times does a middle-aged woman get to know her grandmother at the age of 29, before she was married? KATIE ABERBACH (EXPRESS)

'The Etruscans' offers insight into an early, advanced civilization

Museums

A couple immortalized on a life-size carved-stone sarcophagus set the tone for the National Geographic Museum's "The Etruscans" exhibition about the ancient society, which reached its height of power in the sixth century B.C. in what are now the Italian regions of Tuscany and Lazio. A reclining man reaches his arm out to touch the back of the woman sitting next to him. She gently tilts her head in his direction. They seem to project contentment — and a mutual fondness that's not typically associated with nearly 3,000-year-old civilizations.

"So often when you see a man and woman together [in ancient representations], there's no interaction. You might see them side by side, but not with this obvious familiarity and affection," says

Susan Norton, the museum's director. "Women had a certain level of respect and honor in that society, and they certainly weren't brushed to the side."

That's just one of many stereotypes quashed by "The Etruscans," and its more than 450 artifacts. The Etruscan culture predated the Roman Empire, and was far more sophisticated than the prehistoric, survivalist society many people assume it was.

"What's going to surprise people about this exhibit is the breadth of objects and also the type of objects in it," Norton says, pausing in front of a display of ancient jewelry — some of it, including beaded necklaces, hardly distinguishable from the creations sold at Eastern Market today. "There are sarcophagi, there are urns, but there's just so much more, and so much of it is beautiful. This was not utilitarian; these were actually gorgeous pieces."

All of the works — from a 7-foot-long sarcophagus featuring a plump, reclining oenophile (a final resting place for a guy who apparently lived the good life) to tiny figurines of livestock (talismans to protect animals) to a gold diadem (lavish ornamentation for a member of the upper class) — are on loan from the Archaeological Museum of Florence and Florentine collector Carlo Alberto Cambi.

It's easy to see how elements from this ancient civilization persist today in Italy. The Etruscans threw plenty of banquets and highly valued the food they served with ornate clay bowls. They were also avid olive oil makers and consumers — which they may have learned from the Greeks.

And "it's thought that their wine was particularly delicious and potent," Norton says. That's one thing we hope the Italians never change. KATIE ABERBACH (EXPRESS)

KHALIFA AND CO.

The Pittsburgh rapper shares the wealth — and the limelight — with his trusty crew

Music

According to some graffiti that's gone around, Andre the Giant had a posse. So then why didn't the wres-ting legend ever take his crew on tour with him?

Rising rap star Wiz Khalifa won't make the same mistake. The Pittsburgh native is all about the green, and there's no way he would leave cash on the table when his posse can help rake it in by the bucket.

That's why Khalifa is bringing members of his "Taylor Gang" on tour: Mac Miller, Chevy Woods

The (Taylor) Gang's All Here: A Guide to Wiz's Crew

MAC MILLER

Sounds Like: A 19-year-old with an ear for cross-genre pop hooks and freewheeling wordplay
Influences: Outkast, A Tribe Called Quest, Kanye West
Songs: "Knock Knock," "Kool Aid & Frozen Pizza," "Senior Skip Day"
Mixtape: "Best Day Ever" (2011), "K.I.D.S." (2010) (LP "Blue Slide Park" is due this fall)

CHEVY WOODS

Sounds Like: Khalifa's hype man
Influences: Wiz Khalifa
Songs: "The Cookout," "Shaft," "Campaign"
Mixtape: "Red Cup Music" (2011), "The Cookout" (out next month)

DJ BONICS

Sounds Like: Party-pleasing cut-ups on the 1's and 2's.
Influences: Invisibl Skratch Pkllz, X-Ecutioners, Beat Junkies
Songs: "Rush Boys," a mash-up of Jay-Z and Big Audio Dynamite; "Bam Bam Dead Wrong," where Notorious B.I.G. meets Sister Nancy
Mixtape: None, but check Soundcloud.com/bonics and DJ Bonics, all proud miners of that Western Pennsylvania sound. Because of Khalifa's devotion to his crew, it wouldn't be surprising if the rapper performs his Iron City-celebrating 2010 hit "Black and Yellow" as a full-on Pittsburgh posse cut when his "Rolling Papers" tour lights up Merriweather Sunday.

Unlike the other rappers on the tour — Kanye West protégé Big Sean, Curren$y and Big K.R.I.T. — none of the Taylor Gang has a proper album out. Yet Miller, on the strength of his mixtapes and Khalifa association, sold out the 9:30 Club in May on the first day tickets went on sale.

Khalifa knows it pays to keep your friends close and your posse even closer — at least when they can rack up ticket sales like that. Remember: Merriweather is a big-ass joint (no pun intended).

More Than Words Could Say

Charles Sandison's digital projections invite interpretation

Museums

Standing inside Charles Sandison's "Rage, love, hope, and despair" is a bit like standing inside your head on a Sunday night: a maelstrom of emotions, bouncing off of one another in no particular order. Those four titular words and a few other weighty ones whirl around as digital projections in a white-walled room at the Corcoran Gallery of Art, where the piece is on view through Aug. 14.

One might expect computer-generated art to include slick CGI, but Sandison, who was born in Scotland and now lives in Finland, says he works with simple text to allow viewers to make their computers and returned to coding after studying painting at the Glasgow School of Art in the mid-'90s, finding that he connected to programming on an artistic level.

"A computer program is like a conceptual artwork," he explains, comparing his own process to that of '60s American conceptual artist Sol LeWitt, who sent only guidelines for re-creating his line drawings to galleries. "The physical artwork doesn't exist, but the set of instructions that create it does."

"Rage, love, hope, and despair" was actually emailed to the Corcoran after Sandison revived the 2003 program following its donation from a private collection. (This installation marks its 2.0 incarnation.) "When they opened the box, inside were probably some very rusty computers and some shriveled CD-ROMs," he laughs. He worked with museum staff via Skype to customize the work for the space and coach curators on how to display the piece with new hardware.

Being both creator and conservator comes with the territory for a computer artist. "The bigger problem is finding a museum that's not having a heart attack when something like that happens," he says.

From Sea to Shining Screen

"CAPTAIN AMERICA" opens Friday, and the superhero will roar into a world where good guys are good and bad guys are Nazis. Let your chest swell with pride with these other patriotic movies. USA! USA! USA! K.P.K.

1 Patton

George C. Scott won (and refused) an Oscar for his 1970 portrayal of the famous general, who's about as American as one can get: obstinate, kind of a jerk, but somehow lovable.

2 Team America: World Police

The creators of "South Park" are behind this 2004 all-marionette film with a theme song ("AMERICA, [expletive] YEAH!") that takes the cake when it comes to bursts of jingoism.

3 The Patriot

If you can swallow the 2000 film's glib approach to slavery and pretend you don't know that soon Mel Gibson will go nuts and Heath Ledger will die, it's a genuinely stirring film about the sacrifices of ordinary Americans.

4 The Right Stuff

In this 1983 film, the U.S. races the USSR into the cosmos with a combination of American courage, Yankee can-do spirit and a bunch of German scientists helping us out.

5 Mr. Smith Goes To Washington

Sometimes battles aren't won in war, but through Jimmy Stewart's creative use of the filibuster. After watching this 1939 film, you'll wonder why C-SPAN is so boring.

The Secret Lives of Girls

'Snow Flower' brings a timeless tale of the language of friendship to life on the big screen

Film

When Lisa See published "Snow Flower and the Secret Fan" in 2005, she introduced many American readers to "nu shu," a written language used exclusively by Chinese women for centuries to communicate with each other despite being confined in their homes for most of their lives. In the big-screen adaptation of "Snow Flower" that hits theaters Friday, See's 19th-century tale of two lifelong girlfriends is combined with a parallel story line about a modern-day friendship in Shanghai. Though the author didn't work on the film in an official capacity, she read scripts and offered suggestions as she watched her work come to life in director Wayne Wang's hands.

How do you feel about the modern-day additions to your story?

What I like about the modern part of the story is that it gives an insider's feel of Shanghai today. They've really gotten into the city in a contemporary way. There's, for example, one scene that was filmed at a club called Shelter [which is housed inside a Cold War-era underground bomb shelter]. Now, if you and I went to Shanghai, we might never get to that club. But in the movie, you can visit it.

Li Bing Bing, left, and Gianna Jun play women whose friendship echoes across centuries in "Snow Flower and the Secret Fan."

"Those women had such a desire to be heard that they invented a secret language and ... it allowed them to fly."

— LISA SEE, AUTHOR OF "SNOW FLOWER AND THE SECRET FAN," A 2005 NOVEL ABOUT AN ANCIENT CHINESE WOMEN'S LANGUAGE THAT'S BEEN ADAPTED INTO A NEW FILM.

What was the most important element of the book that transferred to the film?

The thing that mattered to me most was the idea of what people will go through for friendship and what they will go through to be heard. Those women had bound feet, they lived in an upstairs room from the time they were 5 until they died, but they had such a desire to be heard that they invented a secret language and kept it a secret. And it, in a sense, allowed them to fly out of the room, fly out the window and reach across the fields and find other people who would listen to them.

How do you think the general American public — who might not know much about this period of Chinese history — will relate to "Snow Flower"?

I think that's why the filmmakers did the modern part: to help draw people in who might think, "How can I go see a period film set in China that doesn't have people doing martial arts in the trees?"

Hugh Jackman is in this movie.

Not in the book. [Laughs.] He's in the modern part of the story; he's a nightclub owner. He sings, he dances.

Were you surprised about that casting choice?

I was, like, "Hugh Jackman — where's the role for him?" But it's just a cameo. He's actually very good in it. [Producer] Wendi [Murdoch] loves Hugh Jackman. What can I say? KATIE ABERBACH (EXPRESS)

Herb Terrace, the Columbia professor who studied Nim's language acquisition, takes the human-raised chimp for a ride.

WRITTEN BY EXPRESS' KRISTEN PAGE-KIRBY

The Rise (and Fall) of an Ape

A good documentary will make you more interested in the real-life stories that surround you every day. A great documentary will make you want to stand up and throw stuff, either in exceeding joy or flat-out rage. "Project Nim," opening Friday at the E Street Cinema, falls into the latter category.

From James Marsh, who directed the amazing "Man on Wire," comes the story of Nim, a chimpanzee who's taken from his mother (just like all of her offspring) and raised in a human family as part of a language-acquisition experiment. He goes on to live with graduate students and learns sign language. And then he slowly gets less cute and more dangerous, and then bad stuff starts to happen and you'll be glad theater seats are bolted to the floor. A tremendous story of ultimate (if long-delayed) compassion, it's a quiet little movie about a chimp that says a lot. ► *E Street Cinema, 555 11th St. NW; opens Fri., $11; 202-452-7672, Landmarktheatres.com. ## Evolution of a Man

BACK AT ONE: Brian McKnight's made a lengthy career out of his smooth R&B songs, but a few years ago, he tried a new occupation: syndicated talk show host. The eponymous show didn't last long, so McKnight went back to the studio, releasing a new album, "Just Me," earlier this year. He'll play a career-spanning set at the Music Center at Strathmore on Friday.

The trio play an acoustic show at Iota on Saturday.

FRANCES BORCHART

PLEASE PASS THE OLD BAY: The Art League presents local artist Frances Borchart in her exhibit "Prints and Pieces: Views of South County." The photographer captures images of Maryland's Western Shore and then dissects them and places them into empty printers' type cases to create mosaic-like pieces. This is "Blue Crab Feast," which you should not dip in butter.

Whoopie!

If you're as bored with the cupcake trend as we are, then you're probably seeking a new solution for your sugar cravings. Whoopie pies sandwich a frosting filling between two cake-y cookies to create the perfect handheld device for dessert junkies on the go. N.M.

B. HALL, BAKER

Send some love by buying a tin full of a dozen whoopie pies ($39.50 plus shipping) from this mail-order bakery, which offers a rotating cast of flavors such as rich Mexican chocolate, zesty pink grapefruit and sunny coconut.

Jackie's Sidebar

"There's something distinctly Girl Scout-y about s'mores," says Carolyn Crow, the pastry chef at Jackie's Sidebar. Her s'more soufflé cake ($8) is a sophisticated update on the campground treat. Instead of using small rectangles of Hershey's, the resourceful baker creates a rich, flourless dark chocolate cake. She crowns this with a scoop of homemade marshmallow fluff and a sprinkle of graham cracker shards. "It's always very satisfying to see diners scraping at the plate to get that last little bit," she says. → 8081 Georgia Ave., Silver Spring; 301-585-9700, Jackiesrestaurant.com. (Silver Spring)

Ripple

"I enjoyed s'mores as a kid," Cox says. "And I'll enjoy them even after I die." To pay homage to his longtime favorite, Cox starts by whipping up a dollop of dense, silky Belgium dark chocolate cremeux (a thick mousse), which he places atop a bed of crumbled graham crackers. Then he adds a brushstroke of torched brown marshmallow fluff and a crisp graham cracker to finish it off ($8). It might not look like a traditional s'more, but its transportive flavors will help get you in touch with your inner child. → 3417 Connecticut Ave. NW; 202-244-7995, Rippled.com. (Cleveland Park)

Co Co. Sala

"We wanted to do something fun for the camping season," says executive chef Santosh Tiptur. "But we had to do something different." So, he crafted the Some More Co Co. ($12). The centerpiece is a chocolate crème brûlée filled with melted vanilla marshmallows and finished with crunched-up graham crackers. A chocolate brownie and a tumbler of rum-spiked chocolate milk complete the plate.

Baked & Wired

One day, while making graham cracker crusts for her cheesecakes, baker and co-owner Teresa Velazquez realized that the golden base would be the perfect starting point for a s'more bar. To complete her vision, she added sticky layers of caramel and homemade marshmallow fluff, and topped it off with a layer of dark chocolate ganache. Not knowing what to call it, she decided to test it out on customers. "One of my regulars took a bite and the first thing out of his mouth was 'Oh, my god,'" Velazquez says. It's been called the O.M.G. bar ($2.50) ever since. → 1052 Thomas Jefferson St. NW; 202-333-2500, Bakedandwired.com. (Foggy Bottom)

Fahrenheit

When Daniel Mangione had his first messy, magical bite of a s'more, he fell in love with desserts. Now an executive pastry chef, Mangione has created a number of seasonally appropriate twists on the childhood classic for this restaurant at the Ritz-Carlton Georgetown. "You don't want something hot during the summer; you want something cold," he says. So he created a rich burnt-marshmallow milk shake (available free everyday to anyone in the lobby from 6:30-7 p.m.), a marshmallow-chocolate-graham gelato ($9) and a s'more cheesecake with graham cracker crust, a molten chocolate center and mini-marshmallows dotting the top ($9). → Fahrenheit, 3100 South St. NW; 202-912-4100, Ritzcarlton.com. (Foggy Bottom)

Better Than Yours

Shake Shack's rich milk shakes bring all the boys (and girls) to Dupont Circle

New Spot

Seven years ago, Shake Shack opened its first location in New York City's Madison Square Park and kick-started the hamburger revival. After two years of looking for the right location and ironing out the details, the Big Apple eatery debuted an outpost in Dupont Circle in mid-May. "D.C. is one of the great burger towns, so we wanted to be here," says Shake Shack COO Randy Garutti. "There are a lot of great options here already — Ray's Hell Burger, Five Guys, Good Stuff Eatery — but we hope people add us to the rotation."

Vision: "We want to be the intelligent person's burger joint," Garutti says. To outdo your average fast-food patty, the restaurant uses hormone- and antibiotic-free Black Angus beef that's ground fresh daily and includes a secret blend of brisket, chuck and short rib.

Eats: Yes, Shake Shack sells hot dogs and a deep-fried portobello mushroom sandwich, but you come here for the hamburgers ($4.75-$6.75). They're served on a grilled potato bun with lettuce and tomato; a second patty, pickles and American cheese are added by request. Definitely ask for the special Shack-Sauce, a tangy mayo that complements the burger so nicely that you won't even want ketchup. A side of crinkle-cut fries doused in cheddar-American cheese sauce is a worthy addition ($3.65). If you still have room for dessert, order a concrete — a super-dense frozen custard ($4.25 for a half size, $6.50 for a full). The rich frozen treats take some inspiration from the burger joint's newest stomping grounds. Options include the Majority Whip, which combines vanilla custard, homemade rhubarb compote, whipped cream and crepe crispies; and the Washington Monu-Mint, which brings together chocolate custard, minted marshmallow and chocolate cookie dough.

Hungry hipsters, office workers on breaks and homesick New Yorkers all weather long lines for the chance to grab a window seat or a backroom booth at this never-quiet burger mecca.

Drinks: As you should have guessed from the name, milk shakes are a specialty here. They're made with frozen custard instead of ice cream (which gives them a richer, creamier consistency), and they come in seven flavors: vanilla, chocolate, Black and White (vanilla ice cream and chocolate syrup), peanut butter, coffee, caramel and strawberry ($5-$5.50). If you want to class up your experience, order a glass of Shake Shack sauvignon blanc ($7 glass, $28 bottle) or Shake Shack cabernet franc made by Frog's Leap vineyards in Napa Valley ($8 glass, $31 bottle). New on the Menu: If bourbon can be a glaze and vodka a sauce, then why not drench foods in gin? Chef Peter Smith at PS 7's (777 1 St. NW; 202-742-8550, Ps7Restaurant.com) can't think of a reason. Armed with aromatics left over from gin distilleries, he offers diners gin-soaked eats. Selections change based on Smith's whim but, for now, they include dishes such as Gin Oil Poached Halibut ($29), shown; Loma and Melon Salad with Gin Powder ($12); and Roasted Pork with Gin Mash Jus ($26). ### Love of Storage

Pawn shows are passe. The hot TV trend is storage.

A&E's "Storage Wars," above, started season 2 last night. TruTV launched "Storage Hunters" in June. Spike TV has "Auction Hunters." The premise: Storage facilities auction off the contents of abandoned units. Bidders get minutes to eyeball stuff, and then the battle begins. Sometimes they pay way too much for junky junk! Then again, antiques, vintage toys, booze, cash and even a Picasso have turned up.

What's the backstory? Lance Watkins, CEO of Storage Outlet, which participates in "Storage Wars," fills us in.

► Auctions are a last resort if a renter who abandons a unit can't be located.

► Depending on state law, unclaimed stuff is usually auctioned after 120 to 150 days (see Storage-Reserves.com to find nearby auctions).

► Most stored stuff is boring: furniture, clothes, appliances.

► From a unit's auction proceeds, the facility covers a renter's unpaid bill and makes a good-faith effort to send any surplus to the renter. Otherwise, the state gets it.

► One in nine Americans has a unit. We're world leaders in the field! Watkins explains, "We have more stuff."

It's London's Globe

With a debut album and a worldwide tour, Theophilus London is ready for his close-up

Music

The video for "Last Name London," the first single from Theophilus London's debut album, "Timez Are Weird These Days," bears a striking resemblance to the video for Michael Jackson's "Jam." The biggest difference between the two clips is that London — clearly the better ball-player than his opponent in the video — appears equal parts athlete and entertainer. He's everything to all worlds.

It's a fitting performance. London, who can still be considered an MC thanks to his technical rhyming ability, has crushed the boundaries of his own beginnings as a Brooklyn battle rapper, borrowing melody and affectation from countless genres, continents and even the opposite sex. Once lumped in with the electro-rap craze of the late aughts, London makes no secret of his adoration for Prince and former Smiths frontman Morrissey. "Timez," out this week, is a wholly pop-leaning effort.

London's singing voice sounds more polished and warmer than it was when he released a cover of Nat King Cole's "Calypso Blues" with the Dap-Kings last summer. To record the album, London set up camp in Stockholm and Los Angeles, and

Album Review

'Timez Are Weird These Days'

 London has the record collection of an aesthete and the heart of a scener, and "Timez" skims the surface of a variety of club-friendly genres — including bass-driven pop, hip-hop and disco — before settling on a frothy mix of electro-soul and '80s pop/R&B, emphasis on "80s." "Why Even Try," a collaboration with Tegan & Sara's Sara Quin, sounds as if it escaped from an alternate universe's "Footloose" soundtrack. (THE WASHINGTON POST) worked with acclaimed rock producers John Hill, Ariel Rechtshaid and TV on the Radio's Dave Sitek.

"It's nothing like I've done before," London says. "It's all my new influences, my new story, my new point of view. All my new ideas from the last year are all here."

Already touring to support the album's release, London is looking forward to seeing more of the world. "I call it an 'exotic' tour," he says of his summer schedule, which features stops in Montreal and Berlin. "We haven't put a name to it [but] there's an international demand for this. I mean, I hate planes at this point in my life, but I'm very privileged and happy to be on them."

FELIPE DLERME (BILLBOARD)

Avian Invasion: Roku is ready to hatch the popular "Angry Birds" video game on a new version of its set-top box for streaming online entertainment to TVs. The addictive game and a controller will be included on a Roku box that will sell for $100 (boxes that don't include "Angry Birds" will range from $60 to $80). The devices all go on sale this month. The new box represents the first time that "Angry Birds" can be easily played on a high-definition TV screen. (AP)

A British style expert transforms frumpy women on 'Plain Jane'

Reality

CW 9:00 If, as they say, half of life is just showing up, the CW is in trouble. It's decided not to show up at all and to rebroadcast summer filler from last July! What if CBS decided to repeat last year's "Big Brother"? Would anybody watch? Maybe the CW figured nobody watched its shows in the first place.

That said, "Plain Jane" is not half bad. "Jane" is hosted by fashion expert Louise Roe, who, like every expert on TV for the past decade, sports a British accent. In every episode, a nice, shy fashion disaster with self-esteem issues sends Roe an Internet video and begs to be saved from lonely Saturday nights.

"Jane" is based on the premise of any number of cookie-cutter chick flicks about dowdy damsels too timid and insecure to express their love to the guy they've had a crush on for eons. As reality series go, this isn't a terrible idea. It's "makeover series meets Jane Austen novel." But the network obviously didn't have enough faith in the idea to churn out a few new ones for the summer of 2011. Maybe it just thinks the show is like an old paperback you find in a summer rental house. Not your first choice for a beach read or a summer distraction, but it will do. KEVIN McDONOUGH (UNIVERSAL UCLICK)

WALL-E A waste-pickup robot of the future is the title star of the animated Pixar flick. WALL-E leads a solitary existence on a pollution-wracked Earth until he crosses paths with Eve, another machine that takes him back into outer space. The environmental message of the film is clear, but it doesn't hit viewers over the head.

Rookie Blue One of the criminals caught in a sting operation tries to bargain with Dov (Gregory Smith) and Chris (Travis Milne), who wind up trapped in a meth house. While in a hotel room on a surveillance job, Jo (Camille Sullivan) and Luke (Eric Johnson) finally discuss their past.

Profiles

Man in the Mirror

"Titans" (9 p.m., CNBC), profiles musician, arranger and business leader Quincy Jones, shown, a prime mover in the culture business for six decades. An arranger for the Count Basie Orchestra, he worked with Frank Sinatra, among other greats. He produced Michael Jackson's "Thriller," still the biggest-selling recording of all time. Like leaders of any industry, he'll also be remembered by the talent he discovered. And in Jones' case, those protégés—most notably Will Smith and Oprah Winfrey—have done quite well. K.M.

NIH is studying a novel medication for rapid antidepressant response and its effect on memory & attention using neuroimaging.

NIH researchers seek currently depressed persons ages 18-55 to enroll in research studies evaluating how an FDA-approved drug, Scopolamine (for motion sickness) versus placebo can help with depression. In one study, the drug is given intravenously over 7-sessions (inpatient or outpatient), in the other the drug is given by patch over 12 sessions (outpatient). Participants must not be taking medications for three weeks prior to starting the study.

The studies are conducted at the NIH Clinical Center in Bethesda, Maryland, and may include brain imaging and attention and memory tasks to help understand the role of some brain chemicals in depression.
